There is a need for implicit bias education and mitigation in medical education.

This study seeks to integrate implicit bias management with cultural competence training.

Results indicate that students:
1. Have an improved understanding of culturally effective medicine.
2. Can enumerate aspects of culture.
3. Can identify a personal implicit bias which may impact their patient interactions.

The authors have no conflicts of interest.