

School of Medicine

UNIVERSITY OF COLORADO ANSCHUTZ MEDICAL CAMPUS

July 1 – 7, 2022

Distributed by the University of Colorado School of Medicine

Spectrum Launch: When mentoring goes wrong

Researchers need to write better discussion sections in their papers, tweeted Vineet Chopra, chair of the department of medicine at the University of Colorado School of Medicine in Aurora, who also serves as deputy editor for the Annals of Internal Medicine. “I often read discussions that are long winded, meandering and fail to make an impact,” he wrote.

Spectrum, July 7, 2022

Bloomfield boy overcomes traumatic eye injury

Gage was flown to Children’s Hospital Colorado in Aurora and then Gage had his first surgery performed by Lucy Mudie [ophthalmology resident at CU School of Medicine]. Mudie completed an open globe laceration to save his eye. Gage’s care was then transferred to Emily McCourt, chief of pediatric ophthalmology at Children’s Hospital Colorado [and associate professor of ophthalmology at CU School of Medicine].

Albuquerque Journal, June 28, 2022

Colorado’s monkeypox strategy is different than COVID, but hurdles are similar

“For most people, it’s not going to be something they will be worried about,” said Michelle Barron, an infectious disease expert at UHealth [and professor of medicine at CU School of Medicine].

9News, July 6, 2022

Top Virus Expert Warns Boosted People to Do This “As Soon as” They Can

Thomas Campbell, an internal medicine physician [and professor of medicine at CU School of Medicine] who ran clinical trials for COVID vaccines, told UCHHealth, that it’s “important to plan for another wave in the fall and winter because there’s a good probability that it will happen,” as COVID will likely continue to spread due to a variety of factors.

BestLife, July 6, 2022

Neurologic Effects of Monkeypox Virus Remain Mild What to Look for and How to Treat

“Unlike COVID-19, monkeypox is pretty tough to transmit,” said Daniel Pastula, chief of neuroinfectious diseases and director of global neurology at the University of Colorado Anschutz Medical Campus. “You really need to have close contact.”

Neurology Today, July 7, 2022

2 common psychiatric drugs may slow progression of Alzheimer’s, study shows

“We then looked into the huge National Alzheimer’s Coordinating Center database and asked what happened when someone was prescribed these drugs for normal indications but happened to be Alzheimer’s patients,” said Huntington Potter, professor of neurology and director of the CU Alzheimer’s and Cognition Center at the University of Colorado Anschutz Medical Center.

Medical News Today, July 7, 2022

Veteran medical researcher in Colorado waits for a test on drug he thinks will stop Parkinson’s

Over a decade ago, Curt Freed and his team came to focus on a class of existing drugs called HDAC inhibitors after research identified a gene mutation that in rare cases triggers Parkinson’s....“I think phenylbutyrate has a good chance of stopping the progression of Parkinson’s disease in humans,” said Freed, who heads the Division of Clinical Pharmacology and Toxicology at CU Health Sciences Center at Anschutz in Aurora.

Denver Gazette, July 4, 2022

Mortality ratio five times higher for lung transplant patients than nonhospitalized adults

“[Lung transplantation] has been around for almost 60 years, has impacted the lives of thousands of recipients, has seen promising growth with a 30% expansion over the past 5 years and has been the subject of extensive research,” John Iguidbashian, general surgery resident in the department of surgery at the University of Colorado School of Medicine, and colleagues wrote.

Healio, July 6, 2022

Continuous VTE Risk Observed After Lower Extremity Revascularization in Patients with PAD

“These findings provide a more complete understanding of the true spectrum of thrombotic risk facing patients with PAD undergoing revascularization and may help to identify patients at higher risk for VTE after LER,” wrote study author Connie N. Hess, Division of Cardiology, Department of Medicine, University of Colorado School of Medicine.

HCPLive, July 6, 2022

Scientists Predict “Brain Drain” From States That Ban Abortion

Jennifer Fouquier, a computational bioscience graduate student at University of Colorado Anschutz Medical Campus, tweeted about an exchange with a recruiter who’d reached out to encourage her to apply to a job in Texas. Fouquier ultimately declined, noting that the lack of reproductive rights offered by the state would make it unsafe for her.

The Scientist, June 30, 2022

11 Ways to Support a Friend Who’s Considering Getting an Abortion

So if they ask what you think they should do, the experts we talked to suggest compassionately and respectfully declining to tell them. Instead, express confidence in their decision-making abilities, Helen L. Coons, clinical psychologist and associate professor of psychiatry at the University of Colorado School of Medicine, tells SELF.

Self, June 30, 2022

The Race to the Start Line: Returning to Running After Having Covid-19

“Compared to most viral illnesses, the expectation that athletes should have is that it takes on average twice as long to get back to where you were,” Tod Olin, the director of the Exercise and Performance Breathing Center at National Jewish Health [and associate professor of pediatrics at CU School of Medicine], said.

The New York Times, July 3, 2022

What Robin Williams' widow wants you to know about the future of Lewy body dementia

“We can’t undo changes that have already occurred,” said Samantha Holden, an associate professor of neurology at the University of Colorado and director of the Memory Disorders Clinic at UCHealth University of Colorado Hospital. “But if we catch people early enough, can we prevent it from progressing?”

CNN, July 4, 2022

CU Professor of Neurology Dr James Kelly on Demaryius Thomas CTE diagnosis

CU Professor of Neurology James Kelly on Demaryius Thomas CTE diagnosis.

KOA, July 6, 2022