Spotlight On Integrated Behavioral Health Care

Read all about it! DFM's Shandra Brown Levey is becoming quite the spokesperson.

This month, she appears in an article in 5280 Magazine about how DFM's model of integrated behavioral health care in family and primary care clinics is having positive impacts in our community.

DFM Researcher Takes On LGBTQ+ Health Equity

We'd all like to think that when we visit our family physician, we receive the most complete and compassionate care regardless of who we are.

But, for some in the LGBTQ+ community - health equity disparities are all too common.

Rebecca Mullen, MD, MPH, is working to change that.

Professional Development Pro Tip

The University's Employee Learning and Development group offers a number of low-cost classes to staff and faculty.

Topics range from having difficult conversations to facilitation and maximizing strengths. They also offer more "in-the-weeds" classes on performance management, discrimination and harassment and managing people on leave. And, you can commission them to do tailored classes for groups.
