Welcome, Rose Crompton...

DFM's new Human Resources Manager, Rose Crompton, reports for duty in January.

Here's a little get-to-know her Q&A:

What excites you about joining the DFM family and the CU Anschutz Community?

I'm incredibly excited to join the CU Anschutz and DFM families because of their well known reputations of being great places to work. I love that I will be part of an organization with a mission to help people be healthier.

What do you think that you bring to DFM that is fresh and new?

I've worked in different industries from non-profit, academic, high-tech, to environmental engineering and sustainability, so I can offer a different perspective to solving problems and provide innovative and new ideas.

What are you most looking forward to in your new position?

I'm looking forward to meeting the people and the community who make the organization a great place to work. Also, I'm looking forward to contributing and being part of a great team.

What should we know about you that isn't listed on your resume?

When I'm not working, in the summertime, you will find me in the mountains camping, 4-wheeling, hiking, walking, riding a motorcycle, riding my e-bike or just sitting, meditating and enjoying the sunshine. In the wintertime, you will find me either listening to a great local band, watching a Hallmark or sci-fi movie or reading a good book.

Thanks, Rose. See you soon!

3RD ANNUAL CSTAHR GREG WHITE LECTURE PRESENTS:

SICK AND TIRED:
Galvanizing Multi-Stakeholder Efforts to Address Structural Racism and Persistent Health Disparities

In the United States, minoritized, rural, and low-income populations continue to experience suboptimal access to and quality of health care despite decades of recognition of health disparities and policy mandates to eliminate them. Many interventions that were designed to achieve health equity fall short because of gaps in knowledge and translation.

Dr. Purnell will describe existing gaps and highlight innovative interventions that help address them, focusing on the power of multi-stakeholder engagement. Dr. Purnell will also provide recommendations for advancing the field of health equity and informing future efforts to tackle structural racism.
