"It has brought amazing tools such as telehealth and virtual learning into the mainstream to improve access. But it has also highlighted the gaps in care given to our marginalized communities.

The populations that were always marginalized and stigmatized are harder hit by COVID. Those without access to care, those historically mistreated, and those with housing and food insecurity.

Covid has definitely made everything harder. I have seen much more anxiety and depression in my patients. Isolation is hard on humans. I have also seen the impact of disinformation and how harmful it can be." - Dr. Maya Bass
