Department of Medicine Program for Academic Clinician Educators for Fellows (PACE-F)

DOM Program for Academic Clinician Educators for Fellows

Description: The Department of Medicine (DOM) Program for Academic Clinician Educators for Fellows (PACE-F) is a one-year DOM initiative designed to improve the development of clinician educators at the fellow level. The DOM will provide each PACE-F Scholar with up to $10,000 funding during the 2025-2026 academic year, which may be used for medical education research, innovative program development in education, and/or professional development as an educator of the Scholar. Up to two fellowship slots will be competitively offered during the 2025-26 academic year. Applications will be reviewed by a committee of DOM faculty members.

Eligibility/expectations:

- Applicants must be fellows at one of the DOM divisions.
- Applicants should be actively engaged in clinical care and teaching with plans to focus the scholarly aspect of their career on medical education
- Applicants must identify a primary clinician educator mentor and a mentorship team that includes at least one additional faculty member from the supporting
- Applicants must agree to participate in the monthly education scholarship “Works in Progress” group meetings and are expected to present their project updates at least quarterly
- Individuals from traditionally under-represented communities are strongly encouraged to apply

Funding

PACE-F grant funds may be used towards educational tools and materials, data and analytic support, conference fees (if presenting PACE program project), article processing charges, CU credit courses (if not already free), and with prior approval from the Department of Medicine, external courses. The funds may not be used towards personal electronics (i.e., laptop, smart phone, desktop). The funds need to be used by the end of the academic year (June 30, 2026).
