

Housing Resources

Because of the distance separating our three hospitals, residents at CU tend to live all over Denver and Aurora. Keep in mind the closer you live to downtown, the higher the rent will be. Although Denver traffic can be very heavy during peak hours, in general you'll be driving to/from work at non-peak times. That being said, residents that choose to live outside of Denver (Boulder, Longmont, Castle Rock) often face very difficult commutes when winter hits (up to 2-3 hours one way). As a result, we're going to focus on some of the pros/cons of the popular neighborhoods around the city where a lot of residents choose to live.

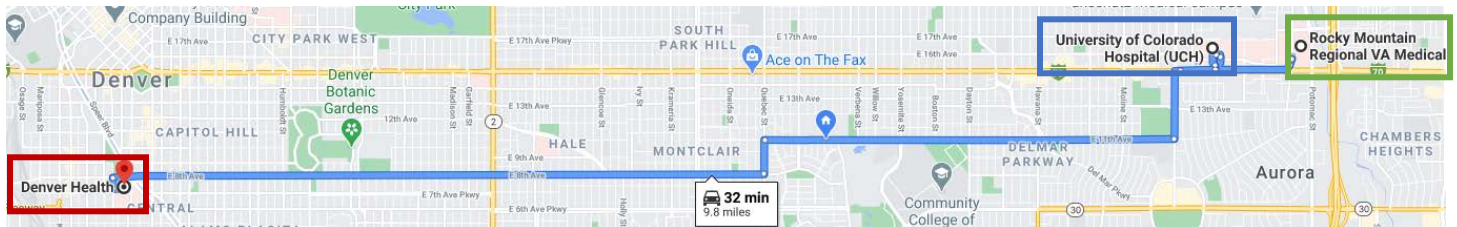

How do I find housing?

The rental market in Denver is unfortunately very competitive, and rentals can go quite fast. If you are planning a trip to look at places, it may be optimal to visit closer (<1 month) to your move in date. If you come much earlier, most rentals on the market will have expected move-in dates within the month, as renters don't want their places to sit empty for more than a couple weeks. If cutting it that close is too anxiety-provoking for you, looking at the larger commercial apartments may be your best bet, as they list their upcoming openings a bit further in advance.

- www.padmapper.com or www.hotpads.com: Pulls from several websites (including craigslist) to come up with a searchable map – great if you know a specific location(s) where you'd like to live

Neighborhoods:

To help orient you to the area, below is a map of our three hospital locations. On average, the drive between the VA and Denver Health is 32 minutes, about 9.8 miles. Denver Health (DH) is located at Speer & 8th, the VA is at Wheeling & Colfax, and University (the U) is at Colfax & Peoria.

The following neighborhoods will have similar maps to highlight their location and proximity to the hospital systems. They are only a sampling of the areas in Denver, so please feel free to use these as a starting point for your search!

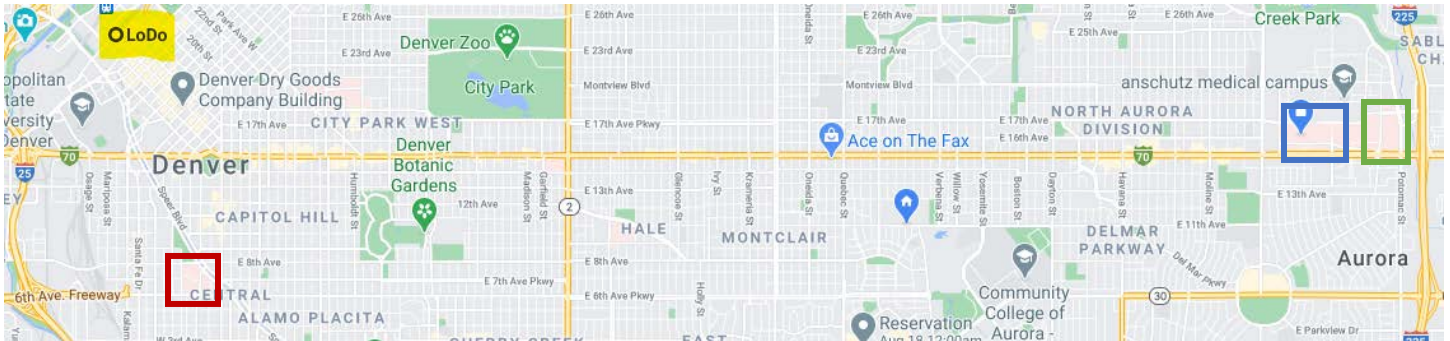

Greater Denver:

LoDo:

LoDo, or lower downtown, is located just North of downtown and South of I-25. LoDo is a broad though short section of town, bordered by Blake and I-25. The South Platte River runs through the middle of it and it has several large parks along the shores. In terms of proximity to the hospitals, the commute via car to DH is roughly 10 minutes. Getting to the U and VA means taking I-70, which is typically 25 minutes in the morning, and can unfortunately be >45 minutes if you're coming home during rush hour. LoDo is predominantly condominiums, though there are rare apartments (largest development would be the Manhattan). LoDo is a popular spot for younger folks, with many recent college graduates living in the area. LoDo has a very large bar scene including sports bars, brewpubs and wine bars and also hosts a number of restaurants and small shops.

- Pros: close to Denver Health, within walking distance of great restaurants/bars/baseball stadium
- Cons: $$, long commute to University and VA, not very kid friendly

LoHi/Highlands

The Highlands and its neighbor, the Lower Highlands (or LoHi) are located just North and West of downtown. Highlands is somewhat amorphous in terms of what boundaries technically define it, though generally it is W 29th Avenue to W 38th Avenue and Zuni to Tennyson. LoHi is even more amorphous; though it is generally considered to be bounded by Zuni, W 32nd Avenue and I-25. These are two of the most rapidly developing neighborhoods in Denver. In terms of proximity to the hospitals, the commute via car to DH approximately 12 minutes. Getting to the U and VA means I-70, which is typically 25 minutes in the morning, and can unfortunately be >45 minutes if you're coming home with rush hour. The Highlands generally consists of single-family houses with scattered condos and apartments. LoHi is more of a condominium development though both houses and apartments exist there as well. They are both known for excellent restaurants and a number of good bars and breweries. Access is very easy to downtown either by bike or foot.

- Pros: close to DH, easy access to downtown, within walking distance of great restaurants, bars, and breweries
- Cons: $$, long commute to University and VA

RiNo

Just north of downtown, an up and coming neighborhood is RiNo (short for River North). It has the reputation for being a very artsy neighborhood. There are lots of hip restaurants and bars. Several of the best local breweries also call this neighborhood home (River North, Epic, Blackshirt, and Our Mutual Friend). It was traditionally an industrial area that is now being repurposed. There are several nice apartment buildings in this area. Commutes to the hospitals are the same as you would experience if you lived in LoDo.

- Pros: Close to downtown but more reasonably priced, lots of fun things to do
- Cons: Long commute to University and VA

Five Points

One of Denver's oldest neighborhoods, it has recently been experiencing a major revitalization. Things are changing and it is now one of the hottest places to live. If you're looking to buy a house in the city of Denver, this may be a reasonable place to look. Interestingly it has been called the "Harlem of the West" due to its jazz history (90% sure no one has ever called it this). The neighborhood is north of Uptown.

- Pros: Close to downtown and Uptown, possibly an affordable house, pretty close to Denver Health
- Cons: Again, pretty far from University and VA

Congress Park:

South of Colfax and north of Cherry Creek, Congress Park is a mostly residential area with a few pockets of restaurants/grocery stores/etc. and multiple green spaces (including the Denver Botanic Gardens). The commute to the U and VA is roughly 25 minutes and to DH is 12 minutes.

- Pros: Very close to Denver Botanic Gardens, Governors Park, Cheesman Park and Capitol Hill, residential
- Cons: Can be pricey

Capitol Hill, Governors Park, and Cheesman Park:

Capitol Hill is a fun neighborhood just east of downtown Denver. It is a densely populated area with a great selection of bars and restaurants. Three of Denver's most popular music venues, The Fillmore, Bluebird and Ogden theaters can be found on the northern border of Capitol Hill. Average rent ranges from $800-1100 for a one bedroom apartment. Street parking is limited after 6pm, but most available apartments have spots for rent. This neighborhood is central to Denver Health (5-10 minutes via car), and is roughly 25-30 minutes from the U and VA taking Colfax Ave.

Governors Park is about a 5-minute drive from Denver Health. It has some condos and apartments for rent surrounding the park and is located right next to the Governor's Mansion. With some quaint restaurants and shops nearby, it brings together all walks of life in Denver; however, some parts of the park can be a little sketchy at times.

Cheesman Park is a large urban park and neighborhood that forms the eastern border of Capitol Hill. Average rent ranges from $800-1200. It is primarily residential but its central location means plenty of access to restaurants, bars, etc. Also, the park itself is huge and a great location for taking your kids, dog walking, frisbee and other activities.

- Pros: Central location puts it within reasonable distance of all hospitals. Lively city life.
- Cons: Difficult to find an affordable single family houses here, most are larger houses that have been divided into apartments, a bit far from the U and VA, some areas not as safe as others

City Park:

City Park is just north of Colfax. It is the biggest park in Denver and contains the Zoo and the Museum of Nature and Science campuses. The park itself is located very centrally to our hospital networks. In terms of commute via car, this area is approximately 15 minutes from DH and 20 from the U and VA. Most places within walking distance of City Park are great places to live and explore.

- Pros: Central location puts it within reasonable distance of all hospitals. Great for kids given walking distance to zoo/museum
- Cons: Difficult to find an affordable single family houses here, buying a house in this neighborhood will cost you well over $500,000. Most places that are within budget of residents will be apartments

Park Hill (Main, North, and South), Hale, and Mayfair Park

Park Hill, Mayfair, and Hale are great neighborhoods to live in. There are a variety of small parks to walk or jog in and many good local schools. These areas are close to the Zoo, the Museum of Nature and Science, and City Park. Mayfair has a great family-friendly park with the “Smoky Hills North” trail on the far north edge. This trail was used in the early 1800s by settlers traveling West. Additionally, these areas are a great central location to all 3 hospitals being roughly 20 minutes to each. These areas typically have very easy parking and fairly quiet streets. Also, there are many great neighborhood strips of shops (such as off of 23rd) which have many local restaurants. The restaurants aren't quite as rambunctious at those on Capitol Hill or Downtown, but are great places for families. Some places right along Colfax are a little bit sketchy, so try to stay a block or two north or south of it. If you're looking to buy, these may be out of the price range, but you can usually find a good place to rent for not too much.

- Pros: Quaint neighborhoods with good schools, great for families, downtown and its activities are easily accessible
- Cons: Can be expensive to buy property, can be a little more sketchy the closer you are to Colfax

North Capitol Hill (or Uptown)

Ripped from a description from Sunset Magazine, “one of Denver’s hippest 'hoods, with lively new restaurants, chic shops and a cheery, progressive vibe.” While its location is decently close to DH, it is a bit further from the U and VA. In terms of housing options, there is a great mix of apartments/lofts and older homes. Overall, this location is wonderful place to go out in and very close to downtown (you could walk to a Rockies game in the summer) with lots of different housing options.

- Pros: Great mix of housing options with a unique cosmopolitan vibe
- Con: A bit far from the U and VA (25-30 or so minute commute)

Glendale

It's actually a separate city from Denver, and it boasts many stores such as the biggest Super Target in town, Home Depot, and probably the nicest King Soopers (a Safeway-like supermarket) you'll ever go to. It also tends to be a quite ethnically diverse neighborhood. Some of the apartments are a bit old, but many have been renovated, and could be a great fit. It's just a short drive to the Cherry Creek Shopping Center. In terms of commute time, it is roughly 12-15 minutes away from DH and 20-25 minutes away from the U and VA. Of note, there are a few clubs such as the famous "Shotgun Willie's" which may attract interesting patrons, but if you stay a few blocks away from places like that, it's not a bad place to live.

- Pros: Ethnically diverse neighborhood, nice shopping centers
- Cons: Traffic along Colorado can be difficult, Shotgun Willie's can bring a unique cast of characters

Cherry Creek:

Cherry Creek is a neighborhood west of Colorado Blvd and south of 6th ave that is still very central to all 3 hospitals. It's anchored by a large upscale mall, several blocks of local restaurants/boutiques/bars (home to probably the best burger in Denver at the Cherry Cricket) and a mix of houses and apartments. This area is about a 10-minute drive to DH and 20-25 minutes to the U and VA. While it can be rather expensive, there are some great "middle ground" gems. Overall, this area has a vibrant feel and is an easy neighborhood to live in.

- Pros: Close to downtown, many restaurants and stores
- Cons: One of the more expensive neighborhoods. As lots of business lives here, it can be crowded with heavy traffic during the day.

Washington Park:

A little further south and west, but a great area that surrounds a pleasantly large park. The park itself has great running, biking, and walking paths, a flower garden, several picnic areas, and general recreational space. Your dogs and family will appreciate living here. Surrounding the park itself is a chic shopping district with restaurants, stores, and sports bars. While it's about a 10-15 minute drive to DH, it is a slightly longer commute to the U and VA of about 25-30 minutes depending on what route you take. Overall, this location is tranquil and will give you lots of green space to play.

- Pros: family friendly, residential, slightly longer commute to the U and VA
- Cons: purchasing a home can be very expensive

Central Park (Formerly Stapleton):

This family friendly neighborhood is located in the eastern most portion of Denver and has attractive school districts at all levels as well as a short commute to the U and VA. There are multiple options for housing including new build homes, apartments, condos, and lofts. Almost all of the housing options are new developments with upscale amenities. There is a main town center with an outdoor mall that has the typical chain stores, a grocery store, and multiple parks. Incoming residents looking for access to the heart of the Denver cultural, restaurant, and night life scene may find that Central Park is removed and has a suburban vibe. The drive time to the U and VA is 10-15 minutes and roughly 20 minutes to DH. The technical cross streets for Central Park are: North 56th ave, South –Montview blvd, East – Peoria st, and West –Quebec St

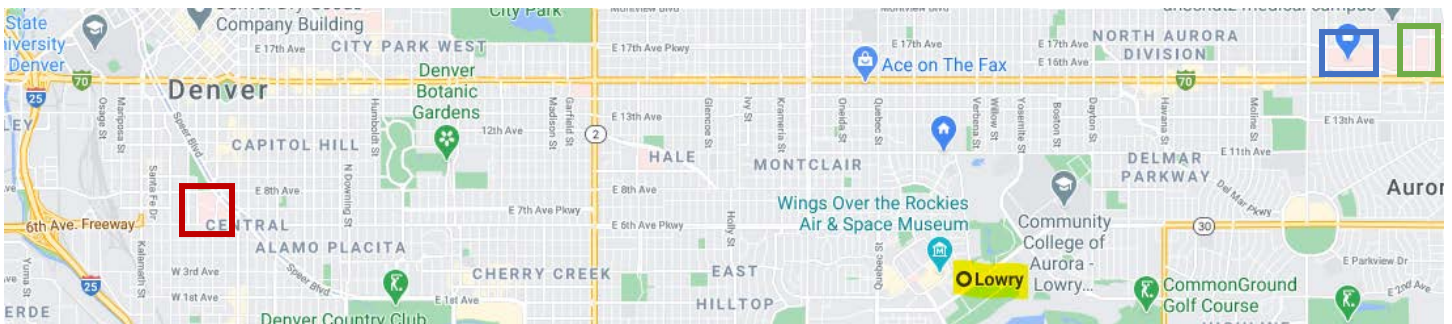

- Pros: new construction, lots of greenspace, good for dogs/kids, not as expensive as Denver proper
- Cons: removed from downtown

Lowry:

Similar to Central Park, Lowry is an eastern Denver neighborhood that boasts a family friendly atmosphere with lots of new development and a slight mix of older homes. There is a local town center that has a major grocery store, dentist, beer garden, 24hr fitness, and multiple shops and chain restaurants easily at hand. Housing consists of new build homes, multiple apartment centers with deluxe amenities, lofts, and older neighborhood homes. Drive times are 10 min to both the University and the VA and 20 min to Denver Health. The nice thing about Lowry is that rush hour traffic does not greatly impact your commute times. Incoming residents looking for access to the heart of the Denver cultural, restaurant, and night life scene may find that Lowry has a somewhat removed and suburban vibe. The technical cross streets for Lowry are: North - 11th Avenue, South - Alameda Avenue, East - Uinta Way, West - Quebec Street.

- Pros: Newer construction. Close to both University and VA (10-15 min). Will get more space for your money here than in more central neighborhoods. Plenty of outdoor green space and parks.
- Cons: Drive to Denver Health around 25 minutes during resident driving hours. Less restaurants, bars, shopping districts than other neighborhoods. Drive to downtown and mountains longer than others.

Outside of Denver

Aurora, Centennial, and Englewood:

The cities south and east of Denver. Aurora itself is very culturally diverse. Each are more suburban than the other greater Denver areas and have a good mix of affordable single family homes and apartments. Aurora is about 25 minutes to DH and can be anywhere from a short walk to 25 minutes away from the U and VA. Centennial is approximately a 20-minute commute to and from DH, the U and VA outside of rush hour. Englewood is approximately a 25-minute commute to and from the U and VA and 15-20 minutes to DH outside of rush hour. Commute timing from these cities largely depend on where exactly you live in each area.

- Pros: Affordable housing prices (with fenced yards!) and apartment rentals. If you live in South Aurora, Centennial or Englewood, you'll have access to an excellent school district
- Cons: Older construction, long commute to the mountains/downtown, be wary of living within 2 blocks north or south of Colfax in north Aurora for safety reasons. Also, most neighborhoods in Centennial and Englewood have HOA fees that will have to be factored into housing prices

Lakewood:

Lakewood is a great suburban city west of Denver. It has very easy access to the mountains and Red Rocks Amphitheater. Pricing is more reasonable than in Denver. Lakewood is quite close to DH (roughly at 10-15 minute commute) and is much farther from the U and VA (30-35 minutes), where you will spend the majority of your intern year.

- Pros: Close to the mountains, relatively short commute to Denver Health and downtown, and has an excellent school district (JeffCo)
- Cons: Long commute to the U and VA.
