

Department of Medicine, 1400 Pelham Parkway South, Building 1 (Room 303 Core), Bronx, New York 10461

I am pleased to announce that the Jacobi Medical Center, an affiliate of the Albert Einstein College of Medicine currently has openings for academic primary care positions.

Jacobi is an academic public teaching hospital and a vibrant member of New York City Health and Hospitals, the largest public health system in the US.

Jacobi is a 450-bed hospital with 100 full-time faculty in the Department of Medicine representing all divisions of internal medicine along with a robust medical residency program of 101 medical residents, all categorical. We see 350,000 patients annually in our out-patient clinics and have a full breadth of services for our patients including a PRIDE center and newly launched LIFESTYLE MEDICINE program.

Jacobi Medical Center has a legacy and heritage of academic accomplishment as evidenced by the many academic leaders in medicine coming from Jacobi throughout its 67-year history.

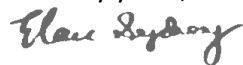

Our medical residents are all academically strong, graduating to pursue in the nation's most prestigious programs including Harvard, Columbia, Yale, Cornell, Mayo Clinic and the Cleveland Clinic to name a few.

We currently have expanded several positions in our outpatient primary care clinic and are seeking candidates that are passionate about providing care for the underserved while also being committed to resident and medical student education.

I would be most appreciative if you could please share this information with your current medical residents who will be graduating this June or anyone you think may be interested in an academic primary care position. We also have an opening for the medical director position in primary care and would entertain meeting any candidates that have at least 5 years of clinical experience.

Thank you so much for your time and consideration.

Sincerely yours,

Elana Sydney, MD, FACP
Chief of Ambulatory Care, Jacobi Medical Center
Associate Professor of Medicine – Albert Einstein College of Medicine

To apply, please send resumes to: recruiter@pagny.org