One-week, in-person intensive courses in Denver | August 22-26, 2022

In-person courses feature intensive teaching and dedicated mentoring by national and international experts with a goal to draft a complete research proposal suitable for completion as a scholarly project for child abuse fellows or early faculty, or as a master's or doctoral thesis.

Highlights

- National and international participants representing multiple disciplines
- Mentoring by leading experts
- Course credit (all courses) available through the Colorado School of Public Health
- Limited, competitive scholarships available, with emphasis on under-represented groups
- Research seminars and lectures from experts in the field

We are pleased to offer financial scholarships
