SCHOLARLY AGENDA:

Dr. Gann's research interests span a variety of areas related to improving physical therapy practice for individuals with neurologic conditions. First, he is interested in identifying clinically feasible and sustainable interventions to improve gait and postural control for individuals with Multiple sclerosis and Huntington's disease. Second, he is interested in understanding the prevalence and prognosis of patients with functional neurologic disorders in outpatient physical therapy clinics. Finally, he is interested in advancing vestibular rehabilitation, and translating evidence-based concepts related to vestibular practice into entry level physical therapy curricula.
