

Community Engagement Forum

As part of the series: “Ethical Practices in Community-Engaged Research”

The Case for Ethical Community-Engaged Research Practice

Wednesday, July 23, 2025

12:00 pm - 1:00 pm via Zoom

Register Now

This forum will focus on ethical practices in community-engaged research. Presenters will share why it's important to ground your research approach in community engagement best practices and will explore how ethical research is understood and implemented – within both the individual level and the broader context of communities and systems.

We'll be joined by two presenters – an active community advocate and research partner, and a researcher specializing in ethics – to examine historical cases of unethical research and reflect on how those lessons have shaped current principles and best practices. During the forum, we will share recent real-world examples that have utilized best practices and those who have fallen short and the consequences that can come from that.

Attendees will walk away with practical tips and best practices for ethical engagement, resources for how to learn more about this work, as well as ideas for fostering accountability and shared understanding in their own work.