Online only. There will not be an in-person location for this meeting.

Accessing Technology Solutions to Access Community Living

Dr. Emily Shea Tanis, Co-Director of the Coleman Institute for Cognitive Disabilities at the University of Colorado will present on the advancement of technology solutions in policy and practice that ensure meaningful access community living for people with cognitive disabilities and their families. The right to technology and information access is imperative particularly now during the Coronavirus pandemic. Innovative and emerging technologies will be introduced as well as the utilization of technology solutions in current and future services and supports. Dr. Tanis has lead the nation in research and implementation of the Technology First movement and will also share with the audience promising practices and steps for Colorado to be a Technology First state. For those who attended Shea's recent webinar, this presentation is complementary but includes different information.

Learning objectives:

1. Understand the role of technology solutions in ensuring meaningful access to community living across various domains
2. Learn about the disruptive technologies of the future and how the disability community can leverage and drive innovation and build public and private partnerships
3. Learn about Technology First and steps to advance Technology First in Colorado
