Travel for the holidays has shifted significantly over the past year. With vastly reduced travel last year, and the introduction of vaccines this year, many are excited and ready to visit family and friends in 2021. News reports indicate that the holidays this year will be at least as busy, if not busier, than before the pandemic. However, in many areas, including Colorado, the positive COVID cases continue to rise, even as some restrictions relax. With many more people traveling both by car and by air, what steps should bleeding disorder patients take if they head out this holiday season?

Get Vaccinated, Wear a Mask, Get Tested

The biggest hurdle to visiting many locations, either foreign or domestic, is to understand the rules and restrictions in place. Some places require proof of vaccination, others do not. Many locations require proof of a negative COVID test within a certain window prior to visiting, and some require a particular kind of test. All airlines, many public transportation facilities, and some public venues require masks. Do your research and find out what you need to know well before you head out. Knowing that you will need to abide by the rules to get to where you need to go, and knowing what those rules are, can help eliminate stress and confusion. Vaccines can help keep you safer from serious infection, and regular testing as required by some locations can confirm that you are heading out without risking yourself or others. Keeping your distance and wearing masks indoors has been proven effective in helping keep you and others safe, despite vaccination status. Stay up to date with all local and destination guidelines to keep your travels as smooth as possible.

Contact your HTC

Those with bleeding disorders have extra precautions and preparations to take whether flying or driving. Our HTC is happy to provide updated travel letters with TSA travel guidelines for medications, bleeding alert cards, and luggage tags for traveling with medication. A travel letter can help you pass through security with your factor medication, which you should always bring as a carry on. If you need extra factor for a long trip, our pharmacy can provide support in planning ahead to have enough on hand. If you are driving, you will need to make sure to keep your factor in proper and safe ways. Our nurses and pharmacists are happy to provide guidance and answer questions about traveling safely with your medication. See our holiday shipping hours to make sure that you get your factor or medical supplies without holiday disruptions.

Our HTC is excited to share that we have a new physical therapist that has joined our ranks! Joanna Roybal started with the HTC about three months ago and has been a wonderful asset to our PT team! She joins Laura Fox in providing much needed physical therapy support to patients. This month we connected with Joanna to find out more about her.

Joanna has lived in Colorado most of her life. In fact, she grew up only a few miles from our HTC. She attended Regis University in Denver, where she earned a BA in Biology, and completed her Doctor of Physical Therapy right here at the University of Colorado Anschutz Medical Campus. She is excited to get to work with our patients and bring her experience to bleeding disorder care. For ten years she worked mainly in pediatrics, helping Cerebral Palsy patients. One aspect of the HTC that she looks forward to is working with patients of all ages and supporting them throughout their lives.

Joanna has jumped right in at the HTC doing all things PT. She and Laura work together providing comprehensive exams, acute evaluations, and treatment plans. Joanna enjoys providing support and education to patients, especially when it comes to gait and biomechanics. She loves helping patients understand how their bodies move and why it’s important. She finds providing support to patients as they navigate challenges related to orthopedic surgeries particularly rewarding.

Joanna has a movie loving husband, three cute kids, and a Brittney Spaniel. She has an identical twin sister and they share a special bond, including feeling one another’s pain. She’s a friendly, outgoing person who loves to connect with others. She loves Colorado, especially Grand Lake, and enjoys hiking, camping, backpacking and road trips. She loves to read, listen to fun podcasts, and enjoys delicious food like mac and cheese, brownies, and ice cream, and spends most of her time keeping up with her kids.

“I love the HTC team and how well we take care of our patients (and each other). Everyone is so knowledgeable and generous with that knowledge. Also—the pharmacy stashes candy and other goodies, which makes perfect sense to me. Chocolate is medicine!” - Joanna Roybal

Our HTC is so happy to welcome Joanna to our team. We are excited for you to get to know Joanna and we are thrilled to have her working with us. Please take the chance to say hello the next time you are in clinic.

Know Your Options

Whether you are visiting inside or outside the country, it is helpful to know what your resources are. If your factor needs to be kept in a refrigerator, does the place you are staying have one available? If you need help infusing or need medical support while you are traveling, do you know where to find the closest HTC or hospital? In the United States, you can find a directory of HTCs by going to the CDC's website at www.cdc.gov and search “Hemophilia Treatment Centers”. Internationally, you can find your closest treatment center and other international travel tips for people with bleeding disorders at the World Federation of Hemophilia website www.wfh.org at their Resources tab.

Verify Your Insurance

Every year there are many changes to insurance plans, and what you may have done before may not apply today. Be sure to double check your insurance to make sure you can be treated outside of your home state. Contact your insurance company directly to talk with them about your travel plans to make sure your resources are covered if needed.

There are many other travel resources, including support from our clinic and pharmacy, NHF chapters and national level organizations to help guide you through traveling this season. Whether you travel or stay home, we hope the holiday season finds you healthy and happy.
